Homeless Family of Nine Sleeps in Borough Council Chambers

The night of Monday, April 26, 1948 was routine for Downingtown policeman Chris Scrafford – until the Malone family walked into the station at 9:30 pm.

Antonio (Tony) Malone was born in Italy in 1906 and emigrated to the United States with his parents in 1910. The family settled in Chicago. In 1930, Tony married Jessie Bonicontrò and they welcomed their first child, a daughter named Palma Marie (nicknamed Dolly), the following year. In 1934, with jobs scarce in Chicago due to the Depression, the family moved east and settled in Downingtown where Tony had relatives. He took a job with the Downingtown Paper Company and the family rented the small home at 164 East Church Street.

By 1948 the family grew to include seven children. Tony was still employed with the Downingtown Paper Company and was working as a beaterman in one of the company's mills. Also by this time, the Malones had moved from their home on East Church Street and were renting the home at 17 Viaduct Avenue from Tony's cousins the DiAntonio's. But in April of that year, the DiAntonio's evicted the Malones – their own relatives – from the home so they could rent it to other family members.

The Malones hired a moving company and their belongings were packed and moved to a Coatesville storage facility. At the invitation of neighbor Mrs. Walter Glauner, the large Malone family moved in with her until they could find another home. But Mrs. Glauner's landlord threatened her with eviction if the Malone's did not move out. The Malone's ended up on the street, living out of their suitcases. At least one night was spent sleeping on the benches in Kerr Park. They eventually went to the police station.

The Malone family of nine lived in this house at 17 Viaduct Avenue in Downingtown in 1948. They were evicted and became homeless when the home was rented to others.

As the Malone's were discussing their plight with Officer Scafford, their five-year-old daughter Virginia (Ginny) fell asleep on a bench in the station. The sympathetic Scafford called Ray Greenleaf, a member of Downingtown's Family Agency Committee, who in turn called Alice Dashiell, who headed the agency in Chester County. Blankets and cots were brought in from nearby homes and Borough Council chambers were transformed into an impromptu dormitory where the Malone's spent the night.

This photograph of Jessie Malone and two of the Malone children sleeping in Downingtown's Borough Council chambers appeared in the May 6, 1948 issue of the Downingtown Archive.

The following night the Malone's returned to the Downingtown police station, but before the family settled in for the night, Ralph Emery, the principal of West Ward School and his wife Elizabeth took in two of the Malone boys in their Stuart Avenue home. Elizabeth McIlvaine and Jane Baker housed the other five children in their home at 517 East Lancaster Avenue. After this the children spent several nights at a juvenile home in West Chester and were taken back and forth to school in Downingtown by Downingtown Police Sergeant Joe Newlin. The oldest child Palma (Dolly) eventually stayed with the owners of the restaurant where she was working. The second oldest child Angelina (Angela) was able to stay with a friend. Perhaps showing some sympathy for their relatives, the DiAntonio's allowed Tony, Jessie, and several of the children who were not already housed to stay in their barn in the Johnsontown section of Downingtown.

Right, Tony and Jessie Malone and daughter Palma (Dolly) in 1933.

But the family couldn't find a permanent home. "My wife and I hunted everywhere for a place to live, but couldn't find any place where they'd take a family with seven children," Tony Malone said. Even Huston McIlvaine, President of the Downingtown Paper Company where Malone was employed, tried to assist the family in purchasing a piece of land in order to build a home, but unfortunately this didn't work out.

The family eventually gave up and decided to move back to Chicago where they rented a home on Madison Street. Unable to afford the travel costs for the entire family, Jessie and three of the children went back first. Tony and two of the children eventually followed. Angela stayed in Pennsylvania with her friend and worked for a year before returning to Chicago. Dolly stayed in Pennsylvania, got married, and had four children. Tony Malone died in 1962 at age 55. Jessie died in 1999. She was 87.

We are very grateful to Karen Anderson, daughter of Angelina and granddaughter of Tony and Jessie Malone, who provided pictures of the family as well as filled in a lot of missing pieces to this story. Thank you Karen!!

In The (Old) News – Items that Made Headlines Back in the Day

1871 – A student attending Abraham Fetter’s Edgefield Institute in Uwchlan Township needed money to stay in school. He paid pay his tuition by trapping and selling polecat skins. We’re not exactly sure what a polecat was, but it could have been a ferret or skunk.

1880 – When the overseer of the Pennsylvania Graphite Company’s mine in Upper Uwchlan dropped by the mine at two o’clock in the morning on February 1, he found eight of the nine mine’s employees asleep. According to a newspaper article, “the sleepy fellows were discharged.”

1888 – E. Vinton Phillips took a much-needed trip to Florida after his successful campaign running for Assistant Burgess in Downingtown. He brought back several live alligators.

1904 – In December, Oliver Harris and Charles Blanning set a record at the Downingtown Glass Works by blowing 415 dozen perfect bottles in one day.

1914 – At a meeting of the Civic Association of Downingtown a resolution was adopted asking Borough Council for a curfew ordinance. The resolution was for children under the age of 16 to be off the streets by 8 p.m. from October 1 to April 1, and by 9 p.m. the rest of the year.

1924 – In August, “Shade” Griffith, a convict who escaped from a South Carolina chain gang, was caught in Downingtown and extradited back south. Detective C.S. Carmichael was paid $50 reward for capturing Griffith. Griffith was serving a 20-year sentence for manslaughter.

Old Phone Books?

Do you have old phone books in your home that include listings for the Downingtown area? Recently we were trying to help someone locate the name of a medical professional who practiced in Downingtown in the early 1980s and if we had a phone book from that period it might have answered the question. We have a handful of directories/phone books up to the early 1960s but it would be great if we had a few more recent ones (1960s through the 1980s). Phone books can be great tools for historic research. Let us know!

Last Issue's Mystery Pic

Mike Pollock is a truly perceptive scholar because he was the first person to identify the image below as the buildings and grounds of the Newcomen Society on Newcomen Road in Uwchlan Township. A number of other readers also guessed the location. However, quite a few readers also thought it was the Church Farm School in West Whiteland Township.

The Society was founded in 1923 in New York by F.W. Loree, but made its headquarters in Philadelphia. Its first president was Charles Penrose. In the 1940s, the headquarters was moved to this location in Chester County. The Society was named after Thomas Newcomen, an inventor of steam engines who was born in Dartmouth, England in 1663. It was established to preserve and promote the American free enterprise system and to honor engineering and technology firms that promoted this system. Over the years, membership in the Society declined, and in 2001 the Exton campus was sold. The Society closed for good in 2007. Makoto Martial Arts owns two of the parcels on the former Society's ground and allowed us to use this photograph

The headquarters buildings included a library, a museum which housed a large assortment of model antique steam engines, offices, guest houses, printing shop, chapel, and bell tower.
